UNDERSTANDING YOUR CHOICES FOR VOLUNTARY WAGE ASSIGNMENT

(1)You can stop the wage assignment at any time, which will stop your wages from being deducted. It will not eliminate your debt, and interest and late fees may continue to accrue. You may contact Right Now Loans for more information about the interest rate and late fees on your Loan Agreement, and to determine how much interest might accrue if you stop the voluntary wage assignment. We will still be able to pursue other means of collecting any debt you may owe. Stop the wage assignment by filling out the enclosed Revocation Notice Form, or by writing a letter stating that you are revoking the wage assignment. Send the Revocation Notice Form or letter by registered or certified mail to Right Now Loans, at the address listed above. It is highly recommended that you give a copy of the Revocation Notice Form or letter to your employer so your employer can stop any pending payments.

If you choose to write a letter, it should be addressed to Right Now Loans, and should include:

(i)your name;

(ii)the account number;

(iii)and a statement that you are revoking the wage assignment, such as, "I am revoking the wage assignment."

(2)Even if the wage assignment has already begun, you can still stop it now or at any point in the future.

(3)You can do nothing, and allow the wage assignment process to proceed. Starting in ten (10) days, part of your wages will be sent directly to Right Now Loans to pay off your debt. This will reduce your take-home pay every pay period until the total amount of the debt is repaid. Up to 15% of your wages will be sent to the Right Now Loans every pay period. Once the total amount is repaid, will send a notice to you and to your employer that includes Right Now Loans's name, your name, and the account number, stating that the wage assignment is closed and no further wages should be assigned.

(4)You can contact to repay the debt, or to explore other options, including a repayment plan or refinancing, if available. You can contact your Right Now Loans at the address and phone number listed above. If you agree on another repayment option with Right Now Loans, we will send a notice to your employer stating that your wages should not be assigned.
